

LISA WALLOCK

St. Catherine's Center for Children

Professional. Direct. Action-Oriented. Enthusiastic. Honest. Lisa Wallock is the Director of Development at St. Catherine's Center for Children, a leading Capital Region not-for-profit human services provider. At St. Catherine's, she passionately educates the community, and potential donors, about the many services her organization provides, including residential and foster care services for abused and neglected children, housing services for families and single adults, special education services for students with special needs, and community-based programs for vulnerable families. She is driven and focused on philanthropic individuals and organizations to assist in the mission. A graduate of Guilderland High School and Philadelphia University with a BS in Marketing, Lisa has nearly two decades of experience in the fields of marketing, real estate, and fund development. She lives in Slingerlands with her two dogs, and a longing for her daughter, who recently departed home for Ithaca College to study Physical Therapy and Dive for the Ithaca Bombers.
