

SARA HADDON

Hixny

Sara has been working at Hixny since 2017 in a number of different roles, most recently as a Product Development Coordinator. In this role she is responsible for seeing products from concept to launch, coordinating product upgrades, and managing the analytic technical team for Hixny's enterprise data warehouse. She works with clients including insurance companies, accountable care organizations, and performing provider systems to provide the clinical data to target gaps in care. This allows them to work with hospitals and practices to better the patient and provider experience, while reforming the healthcare system.

Sara is a 2017 graduate of Siena College, where she studied Political Science. During her time at Siena she worked at a local Obstetrics and Gynecology office, where she started a career in healthcare. At this job she learned how valuable access to medical records are for both the patients and provider.

She is a lifelong Capital Region resident. Outside of work Sara enjoy spending time with her family and traveling. She has a dog, who is beginning the process to become a certified therapy dog. Sara believes in being a lifelong learner and have always strived to be the best she can.
